

Protective Services

Professional Close Protection Services, otherwise known as Executive Protection or Personal Protection. We like to first refer to these services in general terms as Protective Services because we serve a diverse field of clientele - corporations, political figures, athletes, entertainers, private families, stalker victims, and witnesses.

Foremost Response's Protective Services are tailored to the specific client with considerations given to the threat level, operational environment, location, and always - the client's needs and wishes. Agents assigned to Protective Services are done so as a result of their personal backgrounds, professional experience, training, and the ability to adapt to a variety of situations and environments. They possess the necessary skills for discretionary judgment, keen observation, and are equipped with the ability to identify and manage a wide range of unintentional and targeted threats within their immediate environment.

Quality Protective Services entail more than a presence. Protective Service Agents are selected based on their demonstrated ability to address all situations; including worst case with sound judgment, proper response, and discretion. The smallest details are always on the forefront of an Agent's mind and the possibility of embarrassment, injury, delay, or inconvenience is monitored and addressed with vigorous diligence. An Agent's training is far more than weapons and defensive tactics; it includes situational awareness, advance work, emergency first aid procedures, social skills, and driving techniques.

Key factors of the Protective Services Operations are in identifying a known threat, identifying a hostile environment, or identifying the potential for harm or embarrassment. We take great care to be mindful of the image that our clients want projected while in the protective care of Foremost Response. Foremost Response works closely with the client or personal assistants/managers to find the right level and kind of service for low profile or high profile operations, in low, high and varied levels of threat environments.

We provide services to a diverse field of clientele - key corporate figures and their families, political figures and their families, anyone with a high public profile including athletes or celebrities, the individual or family who wishes for additional low profile companionship while traveling with a special emphasis on security & security awareness, to the individual being targeted by a stalker or needing protection as a witness. It also maybe that travel overseas or abroad to a High Risk location is required. Whatever the case maybe - anytime the level of risk or
